ABOUT THE PROGRAMME

The Department of Traditional Chinese Medicine (TCM) at Xiamen University was established in 1956. Over the past 70 years, it has trained more than 20,000 TCM professionals from over 50 countries and regions, contributing significantly to the development of TCM in China and Southeast Asia. As part of the School of Medicine, the Department is supported by 1,023 academic and clinical staff, 11 Tertiary Grade A affiliated hospitals, five teaching hospitals, and more than 50 teaching and research institutions, including national-level centres and research platforms in TCM, clinical education, medical simulation, health big data, and dampness-related diseases.

The School of Traditional Chinese Medicine at Xiamen University Malaysia (XMUM) works closely with the Department of TCM at the main campus to advance the internationalisation of TCM education. Guided by its motto, "Sincere Excellence, Great Healing for the World," the School is committed to nurturing future leaders with strong professional ethics, solid theoretical foundations, excellent clinical skills, research capabilities, and a global perspective.

The TCM discipline is supported by a distinguished academic team, including one National Young Qihuang Scholar (China), five National Outstanding TCM Talents (China), and one scholar listed among the World's Top 2% Scientists. With a TCM Clinical Training Centre, Chinese Medicine Centre, Chinese Herbal Garden, and more than 30 teaching and clinical internship bases, the School focuses its research on TCM in Fujian, Taiwan and Southeast Asia, tongue diagnosis, dampness-related diseases, liver diseases, and global health.
